About the University

Established in 1922, the University of Delhi is a premier institution renowned for academic excellence, diverse programs and strong commitments to teaching, research and social outreach. Starting with three colleges and 750 students, it now spans 80+ departments and over 7 lakh students, guided by its motto “Nishtha Dhriti Satyam.”

Shaheed Bhagat Singh College

Established in 1967, Shaheed Bhagat Singh College, a NAAC ‘A’ Grade constituent college of the University of Delhi, is known for its academic excellence and commitment to holistic student development. In recent years, the college has significantly enhanced its infrastructure with smart classrooms and the Gyan Prasar Kendra, fostering technological advancement and digital learning. Supported by an active Placement Cell, the college nurtures industry ready students, while the departments take great pride in the scholarly intellect, dedication and hard work demonstrated by the student community.

Department of Economics

The Department of Economics, offering B.A. (Hons.) Economics and B.A. Programme courses, emphasizes economic theory, quantitative methods and applied research through workshops and academic activities. The department also publishes the Indian Journal of Economic Studies (IJES), a Double-Blind Peer Reviewed Annual Journal promoting research in economics and allied fields.

About the Seminar

Building on the department’s academic legacy of successfully conducting two national seminars, this seminar examines the economic implications of Artificial Intelligence, with a focus on its impact on labour markets and financial systems. It explores automation, employment transitions, evolving skill requirements and AI driven finance, while bringing together academicians, policymakers, media and industry experts to foster informed dialogue on promoting inclusive, ethical and sustainable AI led growth in India.
